

The Master of Arts in Education/Early Childhood Education degree is designed for educators interested in childhood education.

The program will provide training in standard educational methods with a special emphasis on early childhood development and learning. Students can expect course work that deals with theories behind childhood development and various techniques relevant to childhood education. Courses will also emphasize how to apply general instructional theory specifically to early childhood education. This degree especially focuses on early childhood education and the assessment techniques most appropriate for this age group. Since this degree is research and writing heavy applicants should be good writers. Also, applicants should have at least a few years of experience in either teaching or taking care of young children (Child Care). This degree will provide knowledge and expertise for educators who are active in early childhood education and development. This major will prepare you for: Graduating with a Master of Arts in Education/Early Childhood Education will equip with all the tools to be an excellent early childhood teacher. You can practically apply what you have learned and set yourself apart as an educator with a researched plan and purpose. Parents are beginning to take a special interest in their younger children's education so what you can provide is become quite popular. Graduates often move on to teach younger children in both public and private schools. Other graduates have opened up their own day-care centers or learning centers for younger children with special needs.