

Associate-level programs offer different degrees for a variety of careers. These 2-year programs may provide the necessary training to prepare students for entry-level positions in fields like nursing, graphic design and other vocational areas.

Associate's degree programs in film and video provide training in both the production process and the technical aspects of filmmaking. Students learn the process behind creating multiple types of films, such as educational videos, short films, commercials, and documentaries. They also gain hands-on training with filming equipment, such as cameras, and editing software.